The Japanese Educational System

1. The Japanese Educational System

Education prior to elementary school is optional. Education is compulsory from elementary school to junior high school, which totals 9 years.

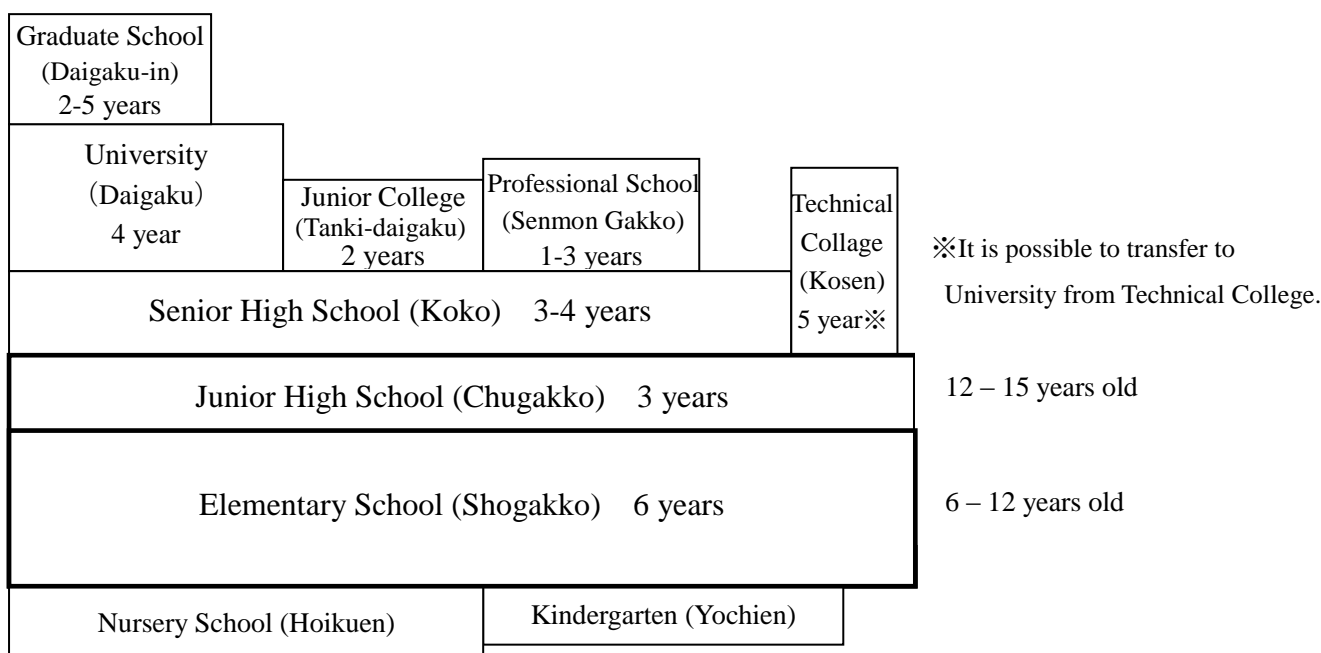

In elementary school and junior high school, there is generally no grade failure, but in high school and university, the student will not be promoted or will not be able to graduate when grades are not satisfactory, or the number of absent days passes a certain number. Regulations differ according to each high school.

A student is suggested to go to a certain elementary school or a junior high school decided by the local education board according to his/her residential area. However he/she can choose a senior high school or a university and is admitted to enter when he/she passes the entrance examination each school gives.

In Japan, more than 95% of the students enter a senior high school, after graduating from a junior high school. Since many companies require the applicants to graduate from a senior high school as an academic background, students who only graduate from a junior high school will have a limited number of jobs to get and lower percentage of possibilities of employment than those who graduate from a senior high school.

Now more than 50 percent of high school graduates enter university, and about 80 percent go to upper schools including junior colleges and professional schools. Their choices of work and qualification will be certainly broaden when they complete their university degrees.

Some senior high schools offer students technical courses to get a job just after their graduation, and others offer academic courses to enter universities. Therefore when you choose a high school to enter, you should consider well about your possibility and your course of life in the future and talk with your family and your teachers. To choose which high school to go means to decide your way to get a job or to go to a university after graduation.

2. Who can take the entrance examination?

Anyone who is over 15 years old on April 1st of the year of high school entrance and satisfies one of the four requirements:

- 1) Anyone who has graduated from a Japanese junior high school or will graduate from it in March.
- 2) Anyone who has finished nine years of education in a foreign country.
- 3) Anyone who has been transferred to and graduated from Japanese junior high school, or will graduate from it in March when one hasn't finished nine years of education abroad.
- 4) A student who has graduated from an international school such as Brazilian school is not admitted as a candidate. They need to pass the "Junior High School Graduation Equivalency Exam", held annually in November. As for the details of the examination, please ask "Special Education Support Section". Tel: 054-221-2090

II. Varieties of Senior High Schools

Depending on how far the student can attend a school, there are three choices of high schools : Zennichi-sei (daytime), Teiji-sei (part-time), and Tsushin-sei (correspondence)

Each high school has its own guide brochure named “Gakkō-Annai”. Please order it and read it carefully.

For example you can take courses that concern your future career in agriculture, industry, business, fishery, and welfare services etc. You can also take in-depth courses in math and science, art, and international relations etc adding to academic subjects.

*3 General Studies Course -- You can choose academic subjects and/or agricultural studies, fishery, welfare services, etc., according to your interests and future goals.

1. Specialized courses and licenses

At schools with a agricultural course, industrial course, business course, or communication course, students may earn various licenses which further qualify them for getting jobs. These licenses are applicable only in Japan, but students will learn basic skills which can be a valuable asset in any field.

2. Difference between public schools and private schools

Because public schools are managed by the prefecture or city, the tuition is quite affordable for any family. At private schools run by each educational foundation, its tuition is generally two or three times as much as that of public schools.

There are also differences in the schedules and the systems of entrance exams between public and private schools.

V. The System of Student Selection

- A student can only apply for one public high school, and only one course of that school. Only in the case that the school has more than two courses, you may apply for multiple courses at a time, with the order of your preference.
- The school district for prefectural high school includes the entire prefecture. Each city will set the school district for municipal high schools.
- The selection process of municipal high schools follows the same pattern as the prefectural high schools.

① Zennichi-sei (normal daytime high school)

(1) General Selection

General selection includes two types : General openings and Selection with recommendation.

In the general openings, selection is made according to the “Chosa-sho” (Student Information Sheet), “Mensetsu” (Interview), and the “Gakuryoku-kensa” (Written Examination).

For the Selection with recommendation, please ask your school teachers.

VIII. About Educational Counseling

A. Educational Counseling in School (Junior High School)

In Japanese schools, there are opportunities for educational counseling in which parents/guardians and teachers exchange information about children's issues.

Topics such as bullying, refusal to go to school, career guidance, etc., can be discussed.

1. Home Visitation (Katei houmon)

The class teacher visits the child's home and discusses the child's life at school and at home with the parent. This is not done at all schools.

2. Parent/Teacher Meeting (Hogosha kai)

Parents/guardians go to school to listen to the principal and/or talk with the class teacher. Topics often relate to study and school life issues common to all the children as a group rather than those of individual children.

3. Three person interviews (Student, Parent, and Class Teacher) (Sansha-mendan)

In most of the Hamamatsu junior high schools, the tri-partite interview is held in July, December, and February (for 7th and 8th graders only). The tri-partite interview is held among student, parent, and teacher, and they exchange their thoughts, in order to understand the student's future, clarify current objectives, and reach a consensus.

For 9th graders, the content of the interview is mainly about the plan after graduating junior high. Student will also obtain information on the high school they plan to apply, and what they should do for high school examinations.

If the parent/guardian wishes to be consulted on any day besides the tri-partite interview, they may be consulted on an appointment basis. When necessary, an interpreter will be made available.

4. Individual Interview (Kojin mendan)

This meeting normally takes place between the class teacher and either the child or the parent/guardian. This is a good opportunity to talk about personal problems and concerns.

The date is arranged in advance and advised by the class teacher. At some schools, the dates may be adjustable, and an interpreter may be available for such meetings.

B. Educational Counseling Outside of School

There are other opportunities for educational counseling. Prefecture, municipal, and town boards of education "Kyoiku Inkaï" provide opportunities to consult about children's education on topics such as special support education for children with disabilities, bullying, refusal to go to school, etc.

Usually, the municipal or town board of education supervises public elementary and junior high schools. Likewise, the prefectural board of education supervises most public high schools and schools for children with disabilities. So, please go to the respective board of education to consult about such topics. (Board of Education of Shizuoka Prefecture Tel: 054-221-3114)

Some Prefectural/Municipal/Town governments may have special consultations for foreigners, including a child's educational issues as well as general issues. English, Chinese, Portuguese, Spanish and other languages may possibly be used in such consultations if it is requested ahead of time.
